

Earth Day Weekly Challenge

Earth Day is this Wednesday, April 22nd. Did you know that this period of isolation is actually helping our planet? Scientists have discovered cleaner air and water around the world as a result of people around the world staying home for the last month. The question is as when we get back to “normal”, how can we continue to help our earth? That is the question that leads to your challenge this week.

Think about what it is that you can do to help our planet and then create a flyer or commercial, also known as a public service announcement, encouraging others to adopt that behavior as well. You can send us your flyer or video to post on our website or share on social media, but also encourage your parents to send it out as well to spread the word and help our earth. Because you are creating a professional product, remember that multiple drafts can help create a high-quality product. You can also get your family involved as it will take all of us working together to save our earth! Have fun, be creative and inspire others for a better world! --Mrs. Fuhr
